

WORKSHOP-PROPOSAL

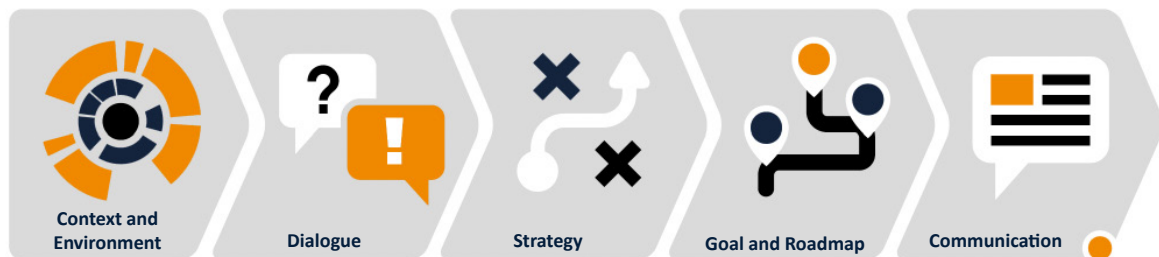

CSRD and European Sustainability Reporting Standards (ESRS)

Your start in an integrated sustainability and data management in your company

Changing legal framework: Comprehensive reporting requirements

The adopted CSRD will affect companies throughout Europe that have more than 250 employees, a balance sheet total of 20 million euros or a turnover of 40 million euros. If two of the three mentioned criteria apply, the company falls under the CSRD reporting obligation. These companies will need to report in the management report on relevant impacts, material issues and therefore management approaches in the ESG or sustainability context - machine-readable and confirmed by auditors with limited certainty.

New reporting obligations: We go all that way

These are the topics covered in the workshop

In the future, structured data management will be necessary for a large number of key figures from various corporate divisions. Although the European Sustainability Reporting Standards (ESRS) are only available as drafts so far, it is nevertheless advisable to prepare for the expected tasks of cross-departmental ESG and IT management in the company:

- Reporting requirements from CSRD and ESRS for your company
- Environmental analysis as part of due diligence on materiality
- Process steps of a progress agenda: dialogue - strategy - policies - roadmap
- Integration outlook for data management
- Timetable for reporting fitness

These are your concrete advantages

- You meet the new reporting requirements and improve your company's performance.
- You manage your sustainable corporate development holistically before the reporting obligations to be expected.
- You optimize ESG rating results and fulfil customer expectations.
- You exploit efficiencies from data automation and avoid interface losses.
- You gather the necessary speed.
- We subsequently provide you with the result we have compiled.
